

ARE YOU UTILIZING SIBLING RELATIONSHIPS TO DEVELOP MATURITY OR SIMPLY SURVIVING?

Communication

Sibling relationships offer unparalleled opportunities for children to learn and practice important relational skills necessary for success in life.

Don't miss the unique opportunities which sibling conflict provides to develop your children's communication and problem solving skills. These skills are necessary for mature function in marriage, career and all other aspects of life wherein they will need the capability to work with others. As parents it is our God given responsibility and opportunity to grow our children through the sibling relationships He has provided.

Using Sibling Relationships To Mature Your Kids

TEACHING
COMMUNICATION
FOR LIFE

Chris Clevenger has been married over 20 years and has five children. She is a strong advocate of adoption, having been adopted as a young woman, as well as adopting three of her own children. Chris loves athletics, teaching, writing, studying relational topics and is working toward a degree in neuropsychology.

Chris Clevenger,
Motivational Speaker
and Writer

cc@RELATE1st.org

(636) 497-2204

www.RELATE1st.org

Location Date and Time